Around The World

VIENNA, (UP)—The Czech government has admitted publicly that some Czech writers and students are bucking the Communist party line.

The admission was contained in a speech by Czech Deputy Premier Václav Kopecky to the Prague conference of Czechoslovakia's Communist Party, Radio Prague reported it late yesterday.

In several departments of Prague university students have composed provocative resolutions against the people's democracy and Communist party," Kopecky said.

He said the students demanded "abolition of the university lecture program on Marxism-Leninism," the heart of the Communist doctrine.

Kopecky said the students even went so far as to call for re-establishment of "the old bourgeois academic freedom."

This, said Kopecky, defied the real feelings of the working population. He said the trend must be "dealt with" but not through retaliations.

He said flatly that part of the Czech writers congress "turned against the Communist regime."

The Communist party appeals to their members in the writers association to influence actively their colleagues and to direct the association's policy the right way," Kopecky said.

He admitted that a number of party members were "confused" by the 20th Soviet Party Congress in Moscow which started the anti-Stalin campaign.

PARIS, (UP)—Lord Ismay, secretary-general of NATO, said today the West must not ignore "any reasonable proposal" that comes from the Russians.

Lord Ismay said the Soviet Union must give the West real reason to believe there has been a "change of heart and not merely of tactics" by the Russians.

Ismay, who will retire from NATO next April after five years in the job, expressed his views in an interview with Ernest Barcella, United Press Washington Bureau manager, who is touring U. S. installations in Europe and North Africa.

"We must not brush aside any reasonable proposal by the Russians," he said. "We should go to meet them more than half way. We must never be dogmatic, but we must be wary."

He spoke fondly of NATO as "the greatest and most successful international organization that has ever been."

It has achieved the two aims so forth at its birth in 1949, he said—preserving peace and preventing further Soviet aggression in Europe.

ENTROCAMENTO, Portugal, (UP)—Domingos Faia, 83, a marketplace sweeper, was not in the best of health but he wanted to get married anyway.

He was baptized in the morning, married in the afternoon and died the same evening.

LONDON, (UP)—Ileitis, the disease which sent President Eisenhower to the hospital, recurs in one case out of five even after successful operations, according to the British Medical Journal.

The journal said regional ileitis "is essentially a chronic disease, though the acute forms occur mostly in childhood."

SUNDERLAND, England, (UP)—Ferry boat operator Abraham McLean was paddled off his job today for complaining he was overworked and underpaid.

McLean went on a one man strike when he asked for time for meals and double his salary of $9.80 a week. He said he worked an 11-hour week. The ferry owner fired him.

BUENOS AIRES, (UP)—An Argentine financial mission scheduled to leave for the United States tomorrow was postponed its departure until June 23, it was announced yesterday.

A spokesman said that Economist Carlos Coll Benegas, head of the mission, will be sworn in Monday as president of the bank of the Big Jump in Store Sales

ST. LOUIS, (UP)—Department store sales in the Eighth Federal Reserve District jumped 13 per cent last week over the same period on year ago, it was announced today.

The Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis reported the gains ranged from 2 per cent in the Little Rock area to 17 per cent in St. Louis.

The Louisville area reported a 6 per cent jump and Memphis 13 per cent. For the four-week period ended June 9, sales advanced 3 per cent from the comparable period one year ago.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, (UP)—Italian Motion Picture Director Roberto Rosellini quit suddenly yesterday filming the picture "The Sea Wife."

Rosellini, husband of Actress Ingrid Bergman, would not comment on his walkout. The picture, featuring British stars Richard Burton and Joan Collins, is being made by the Sumar film production for distribution by Twentieth Century Fox.

Jackson Still Interested in Hospital Job

By BRYCE B. MILLER

LITTLE ROCK, (UP)—Dr. George Jackson of Opeka, head of Kansas institutions and the highest paid Kansas state official, said this morning he is "interested" in returning as head of the Arkansas State hospital.

Dr. Jackson, long rumored as Governor Orval Faubus' personal choice as a successor to hospital superintendent Dr. Ewing H. Crawford, appeared before the State Hospital Board of Control today to give his ideas on a budget for the next two fiscal years. He accepted a position as consultant on budgetary matters several weeks ago.

Tomorrow Jackson and the board will appear before the state Legislative council.

This morning he declined to reveal just what his recommendations concerning a hospital budget were, but indicated that they constituted a "considerable increase in appropriation."

Australian Lass Take's Hope's Word

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, (UP)—Less than a year ago, Victoria Shaw met Bob Hope in Australia. Since then she has:

Come to Hollywood.

Starred in a movie.

Acquired a future husband.

Hope, who is sometimes called Rapid Robert, has nothing on Victoria when it comes to traveling fast. She is still reeling from the events of the past year.

"I hope things will simmer down soon," said the lovely Australian, who was preparing to leave for a publicity whirl in New York.

It all started during one of Hope's globetrotting hours. He cabled to Sydney for some models to appear in a fashion show he planned to use in his appearance tour Down Under.

Victoria, one of Australia's leading models, was one of those who appeared. She told Hope of her desire to go to America. He remarked casually to look up his agent if she ever did.

She was in Hollywood before he returned.

"My idea was to come here and learn about television, then return to Australia and have my own show," she said. "There is no TV there now, but they plan to start this fall."

She remarked that Australia is no place for a young actress.

"There is absolutely no opportunity," she said.

What held her back from coming here sooner?

"I didn't know any Americans. I was waiting until I knew someone. When I arrived, the only ones I did know were Bob Hope and his press agent."

Hope's agent took her to Columbia, where she was tested, signed and cast opposite Tyrone Power in "The Eddy Duchin Story," playing the pianist's second wife. Previewers are touting her as a real find.

In the course of her drama studies, she met up with another screen hopeful, handsome young Roger Smith. It's love, and they plan to be married soon.

Democrats to Meet June 25

LITTLE ROCK, (UP)—The state Democratic Committee will meet here June 25 to see what can be done for nomination a candidate for prosecuting attorney for Garland and Montgomery counties.

The late Elmer Tackett of Hot Springs was the only one who had filed for the position before the ticket closed early last month.

Committee Chairman Tom Harper of Fort Smith said he didn't expect

Musical Festival At B&B Sunday Night Sunday Night June 17, several musical groups will sing at the B&B C. M. E. Church in a special musical program. Miss Frankie Pighee, a young artist, recently discovered by Rev. Stearns will be featured as the main soloist in the Sunday night service.

Miss Pighee is considered to be one of the best gospel singers in the state of Arkansas, and has been featured several times on the Inspirational Hour.

Other groups appearing on the program will be the St. Peters C. M. E. Church youth choir of Ozark, Arkansas, the New Light C. M. E. youth choir of Nashville, Arkansas, several groups from Prescott, and the Five Gospel Harmonizers of Hope.

The program will start at 7:30 p. m. There will be no admission charges.

Athletes in Olympic Team Showdown

By BOB MYERS

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — The struggle for National Collegiate honors in track and field reached the showdown stage today, with survivors of the preliminaries competing for a chance to make the United States Olympic team.

Behind lay five National Collegiate Athletic Association records broken, the most impressive being a surprising shotput of 60 feet 1/2 inch by Manhattan College's giant Ken Bantum, the third man in history to beat 60 feet.

In prospect this afternoon on the University of California's Edwards Stadium were torrid duels in the 100 meter dash, the 200, the 1,500 and other events.

At state was the chance for the first six finishers in the various events to qualify for the all-important Olympic tryouts in Los Angeles June 28-30.

Bantum, now Bantum at what NCAA record on his second put with a mark of 59-5/8, and then smashed it further with his 60-1/2. In 1955 world record holder Parry O'Brien set the NCAA standard at 58-7/8.

Only O'Brien and Bill Nieder of Kansas, with 60-3/4, have passed 60 feet, and yesterday Nieder, the defending college champ, had to settle for 57-3. He and the other six qualifiers get three more tries in today's finals.

The preliminaries didn't develop much in the 100, 200 or 400 meter dashes rivalries.

In the 100, Dave Sims of Duke won his heat in 10.6, Bobby Morrow of Abilene Christian 10.8 and Mike Agostini, Fresno State, 10.5, the same time credited in the same heat for California's Leamon King.

Sims let down enough in the 200 to finish second in 21.1 to 21.0 by Dick Blair of Kansas, while Morrow in his heat won at 21.7 to Agostini's 21.9.

J. W. Mashburn, Oklahoma A.M., the 1955 winner, won his semi-final 400 heat looking back in 48.8 over Herb Washington, Morgan State.

In the scramble for team honors, Kansas led the way into the finals with nine men qualified. Next with eight was UCLA and the defending Trojans of Southern California with seven.

OUT OF DOORS with Field & Stream

By AL McCLANE Fishing Editor

There are two kinds of leaders used in fly fishing — one level, the other tapered.

Level leaders have very limited value and no matter what their length may be they seldom help your casting. Tapered leaders, on the other hand, will put more fish in the creel because the heavy butt end tied to the line will turn over smoothly in the cast, and the fine tip end is almost invisible in the water.

The great majority of commercially tied tapered leaders are too light for modern-day fly lines. While the line makers have made great strides in floatability and improved designs, leader making remains an old-fashioned affair.

They seem to work on the theory that when a light dry fly leader is wanted, it should be as light as all the way through. As a result, the butt or heavy ends will measure .015 to .012, while the fine ends .015 to .012, depending on whether it is listed as light, medium, or heavy.

On the other hand, the tapered end of the average American line will measure about .030, or roughly twice the size of the leader

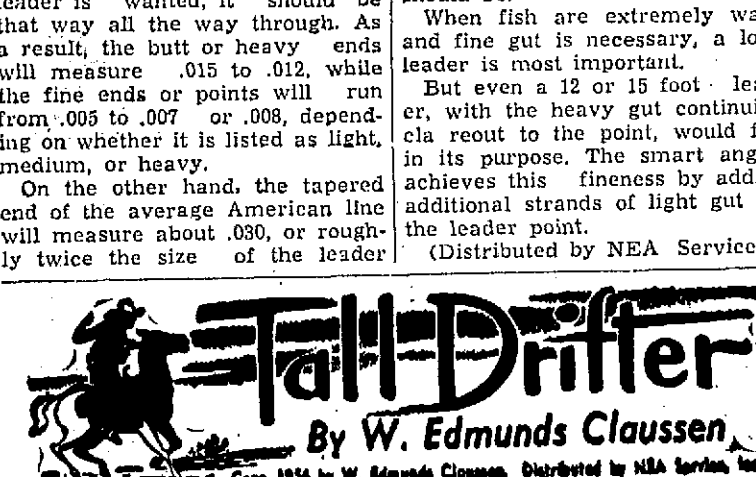

but. This difference in diameter makes a rather abrupt jump from line end to leader that is not conducive to satisfactory handling of the cast.

A long leader may be as fine as you like on the point, but unless it has some body at the line end, which can be attained by a sufficient diameter, it is likely to prove a rather futile affair in casting. To balance well with the line, the taper to the fine point should be gradual, rather than largely accounted for in one step from the line end to the leader butt.

The butt end of the leader should be at the very least half the diameter of the line end to which it is attached (and preferably three-fourths of that diameter). Second, the longer the leader, the heavier the butt end should be.

When fish are extremely wary and fine gut is necessary, a long leader is most important. But even a 12 or 15 foot leader, with the heavy gut continuing clear to the point, would fail in its purpose. The smart angler achieves this fineness by adding additional strands of light gut to the leader point.

By W. EDMUNDS CLAUSSEN Chapter XXIV

Frank swung to his saddle. Chantry, he saw with pleasure, had replaced his rifle. He withdrew it from the boot, opening the breech and checking to find it still loaded. Lifting his eyes a bare fraction he was able to make it still a figure standing in the shadows beside the Alhambra porch—Lew Chantry was keeping an eye on his town.

Then at the edge of town he drew in the black, turning for a final look at the street. Resentment swept over him as the shock of the shooting returned. His mind was full of that scene in George La Tour's yard, of Northing's loy manner, and revulsion of this town's evil carried its bitterness through him. Northing had admitted a meeting at the bank between Hackett and himself and the bank clerk, and Frank understood the order had gone out to break him.

While the raw anger swelled through him the sore spots from his fighting with Milo began to ache once more. Rancor filled him. He slipped the saddle gun from its boot looking forward to the confusion he would cause in the Alhambra when he shot out its lamps.

Then unexpectedly a vision of Lew Chantry came to him as he appeared beside the saloon porch awaiting for Cashtown. Frank's finger paused on the half drawn trigger, a cool draft lifted the hackles along the back of his neck. He very nearly had made an error, for Chantry leaped heavily toward Jean Cash in sentiment. Slowly he lowered the saddle gun from his shoulder.

"You surprised me, Frank," a husky voice came from the curb-line.

He turned seeing Lily appear beside an adobe building.

"Hyman came to help watch Jonathan," she explained softly. "I went out after a little air. I knew you would be along this way."

"Lily, you're as much out of place in this camp as a preacher at a game table."

She stood beside his knee, her light cloak open along its front revealing a lacy dress. She shrugged, and the scent of her clothes rose to him. "You're here without explanation, too. You're just rode into this camp. You rode into something that's bigger than you expected, something that's caught you up, and might kill you. Why don't you ride on?"

He merely shook his head. "All that doesn't explain you, Lily. You sing like an artist. Everything about you speaks of being a lady — you don't act like one."

His words struck the smile from her mouth. She continued to look at him sharply. "Walking You're dark road to meet a man you're right, Frank. I wanted to be with you. I want you to hold me."

He held her gaze and when he was sure of what he read in her eyes he leaned over his saddle. Her arms came about his neck and so he lifted, holding her tight. Her mouth pressed warmly against him.

"Well, that's this much. Something I can remember," she said. "Thanks taking it where you find it, for sure," he said slowly. "Lily, what makes you like this?"

"Tomorrow it may not be worth taking. I'm afraid the Cash woman has got your interest. Tomorrow you may be dead."

Her cynicism shook him. "Something's given you a terrible shock, hasn't it?"

Again she stepped closer and placed her hand against the back of his neck. "You weren't in the war, were you? But you've had something else I show — his thing that's tempering does — steel, what I see in your face. With me, the heat destroyed some quality inside. Before Secession I studied with Madam Phips in Richmond. I saw her go hungry. I saw her steadily weaken, until she was faint. I saw Sheridan's cavalry ride on our lawn and I asked them not to go into the house. Mother was ill and by that time my father was half insane." She drew a long, deep breath, and Frank could sense the undying hatred she knew toward the soldiers. "A copperbottomed captain went into the house with a dozen troops in spite of everything I told him. There was a pistol shot and I knew father had fired at them. When they came out the captain was holding his arm. Blood was running between his fingers. He barely looked at me when he climbed to his saddle. There was smoke coming from the door — and that was the end of my world."

She walked away.

She slipped out of her cloak feeling depression lash out at her and grip her. She was conscious of Hyman stepping in from the other room but kept her back to him. She had been over this endlessly in her mind since the first time they had been alone and it wasn't pleasant. When he looked at her she felt like shouting: "Where were you 10 years ago? I could have loved you then!"

"With a voice like yours, you should be somewhere else."

She smiled half sadly. "Then don't get it involved with me. I'm not — what you believe."

His hands tightened on her arm until they hurt. "I'm asking you to marry me. If you want I'll take you away from this."

She was silent a long moment. "Hyman, you're in the wrong and I'm counting on you to leave the hall. Please leave me now."

Mantle Would Rather Hit a .400 Pace

By JOE REICHLER

NW YORK, (AP) In addition to hitting home runs where they've never been deposited before, Mickey Mantle is swinging at close to a .400 pace in a league where such a mark has not been cracked since Ted Williams did it in 1941.

"Sure, I'd like to leave some good records behind when I'm through," said the 24-year-old star. "Who wouldn't I'd be lying if I said I didn't get a bang out of all those home runs. But honestly it's not the same feeling as when Dad was alive. Everything I've achieved in baseball, and in everything else, I owe to him. He devoted his entire life to me."

"When he was alive, I couldn't wait to call him after I'd hit a home run and hear what he would have to say. He never bragged and never wanted me to. 'How many times were you at bat, son?' he'd ask and I'd tell him 'four.' Then he'd say, 'you should have hit a couple of more.' He said that so I wouldn't become swell-headed, but I knew that secretly he was pleased. That made me happy."

If Mickey had his choice, which would he prefer — break Babe Ruth's home run record, become the first to hit the ball out of Yankee Stadium, capturing the triple crown (batting, home run and RBI titles), was the most valuable player award or hit .400?

"Hit .400," he replied without hesitation. "First of all, I'm not aiming at Ruth's record nor am I trying to hit the ball out of Yankee Stadium. I feel I hit .400, the home runs, RBIs and everything else will fall in line. You've got to do everything right to be lucky enough to hit .400."

What are his worst fears? "My legs," he answered. "I've got the legs of an old man. I'm always worried about hurting them. As a result I'm afraid to extend myself. That's why I don't do much base stealing. I keep thinking the maybe I ought to cut out bunting. It's too much of a strain on the legs. But once the game starts, I forget all about preserving them. I get too wrapped up in the game."

Mickey, despite his powerful frame, is so brittle that either of his legs could end his career. Mantle looks healthy but he's never played a full season since he started as a pro — and that includes two seasons in the minors.

Probably no one will ever know how tortuous it is for him to run so fast and so hard every day. His legs are heavily tapped every day from shin to thigh.

Is he concerned over the lionizing the raves the ballyhooed "To a certain extent," he said. "It's just that I wish people wouldn't expect me to hit a home run every game. I'm really hitting over my head right now. I know I can't and won't keep up this pace. I wish people would realize this and not expect too much from me. Please print that."

Does Mickey think he'll break Ruth's 60-home run record this year or any other year?

"No, don't," Mickey replied. "If I ever do, though, it will be the gladdiest and saddest day of my life. But why does everybody compare me with Ruth. It's absurd to even mention the two of us in the same breath. I don't rate with a great man like the Babe."
